Saturday	8:00:00 PM	8:45:00 PM	Stacey	Grant	We are not too small to grow. If we think small, we will act small and remain small. Many small congregations fail to grow due to a lack of preparation and personal participation. Personal maturation is the door to congregational growth. Vital: Also, every member should be acutely aware of the vision/mission of the congregation. Key Thoughts: (1) there are ways in which you as an individual Christian can help your local small congregation grow. (2) Do we all share the same vision for this work? Are we all educated about and engaged in the work?	Small Church and Ministry	Hotel Deep Creek	19-Aug

If statistics and subjective data in my own life are correct, the church of our Lord loses 50% or more of our young people to the world between high school and college. Those who remain often seem satisfied with marginal involvement and passive participation. For two generations, we have devoted time, money, and effort to various forms of "youth ministry" with the attitude that "we can never do too much for your youth." However, evidence suggests that our methods are failing, perhaps because we are "aiming at the wrong target." We have been focusing on the adolescents and teens when we should be focusing on the families having children. The most reliable predictor of a child's faithfulness and retention (see Yeakley, Why They Left , for example) is having two faithful parents actively engaged in the local church. Statistically, children raised in this environment remain faithful at much higher rates.	Elders and Deacons and Youth Workers and Parents	SEC Ballroom D	22-Aug
